Craniofacial reconstruction is a forensic technique developed to render a facsimile of how the skeletal remains (the skull) might have appeared in life. Working in conjunction with the anthropologist and medical examiners the technique is based on soft tissue depth on various locations of the skull. The tissue depth depends on age, sex, race and body density. The reconstructions are completed with the mouth open and the mouth closed. If the hair color and length is known, wigs are used.

Forensic facial reconstruction is the process of recreating the face of an individual from their skeletal remains through an amalgamation of artistry, anthropology, osteology, and anatomy. It is easily the most subjective—as well as one of the most controversial—techniques in the field of forensic anthropology. Despite this controversy, facial reconstruction has proved successful frequently enough that research and methodological developments continue to be advanced. In ...
