Sensorial experiences occur in mutual interaction. Art can play an important role in revitalizing the overall sensorial system and offers time and space for reflection on embodied technological experience. Jones focuses on the undervalued sense of smell (olfactivism), the way avant-garde currents instrumentalized senses in body-art, installations, and experimental sound-art, the relation of urban modern life and the development of acoustic technologies, and the intertwined relationship ...

Sensorium: Embodied Experience, Technology, and ...

The relationship between the body and electronic technology, extensively theorized through the 1980s and 1990s, has reached a new technosensual comfort zone in the early twenty-first century. In Sensorium, contemporary artists and writers explore the implications of the techno-human interface. Ten artists, chosen by an international team of curators, offer their own edgy investigations of embodied technology and the technologized body. These range from Matthieu Briand's experiment in ...

Sensorium: Embodied Experience, Technology, and ...

This two-part exhibition organized by the MIT LVAC, explores various ways in which contemporary artists address the influence of technology on the sense. The impact of new technology has reshuffled the established hierarchy of the senses and radically changed people's lives. Remote sensing via telephones and screens are fundamental parts of the daily sensorium (a Latin term that connotes ancient and often theological debates about mind and body, word and flesh, human and artificial). The ...
