

Verbal Critical Reasoning, Question : 1/40 Help

Choose the correct answer

Mobile phone users generally take a computer like approach when operating their phones?

True
False
Cannot say

Explanation Next Question

The operation of mobile phones is becoming increasingly complex and users are now required to take a more computer like approach to effectively operate a phone. For example, new mobile phones often have high level features such as text messaging, audio visual facilities, Internet and computer gaming. Some users are likely to find it increasingly difficult to operate these features, although there is a large and growing sector of young users who seem more naturally competent at using these features.
